

The Honda Fit: A Great Car

Within the last couple years, major car companies introduced small and compact cars and the Honda Fit is one of them. Any Honda vehicle can always be relied on for its efficiency and economical performance, but the Honda Fit has taken the concept of a car to another level.

Compact cars, like the Honda Fit, offer plenty of advantages over regular sedans, coupes and SUVs. For one thing, the Fit is easier to park and maneuver. Small cars are more environmentally friendly and help save money thanks to their fuel efficiency.

The Honda Fit is a downright user-friendly, youthful and fun to drive car. Whether you want to help the environment or drive a car that's more efficient, you can always count on the Honda Fit. Below are some of the reasons why the Honda Fit is a Great Car to consider buying.

The Honda Fit has the Looks

The Honda Fit comes with a refreshing look compared to the usual cars we are used to. It is stylish with a hood that curves into a rounded shape. The spoiler in the back atop the hatch adds a touch of sportiness. The latest Honda Fit comes with 16-inch alloy wheels and a chromed exhaust tip for more luxury.

At quick glance, the Fit stares back at you with its fierce looking headlights. The windshield is expansive and improves visibility while driving. Aside from the regular design, you can also choose between the Fit Sport and the Fit Sport with Navigation.

While the Fit is small and compact, it has scored at the top of the safety list. It is designed to stand against head-on collisions and can withstand whiplash injuries.

Small Size, Big Interior

The interior of the Honda Fit seems to surprise most people due to its roominess. The seats are comfortable and retractable. They can recline to add more space for storage. One of the advantages of the interior is that it has 10 cup-holders.

Performance

With a 4-cylinder, 1.5 liter motor the Honda Fit is a high performance and fuel efficient car. The latest Fit is 117 horsepower vehicle and can get even more powerful with its 5-speed manual transmission. While the transmission does not compare with other luxury and more expensive cars, the fit offers a decent drive for the average consumer. The Fit also comes in both manual and automatic depending on preference.

The Honda Fit comes with electronically assisted steering and for its low price, the quality of the drive is appropriate. Most people who purchase the Honda Fit are more interested in the roominess, style and design. The new Fit comes with excellent mileage and great handling.

The Honda Fit is the ideal car for going about daily activities such as school, work and going out with a couple friends at night. With a base price of about $14,500, it is stylish and sporty with plenty of room inside. The Honda Fit is a happy-go-lucky car and is the perfect Fit for any budget.

Why I Love My Honda Fit

Nowadays, consumers are on the hunt for economical cars that also look good and perform well. The luxury line of cars out there and some of the budget friendly sedans are not the most appealing or efficient.

Thankfully, Honda made the decision to introduce the Honda Fit, a unique and fuel-efficient car that is almost always adored by its owner. Once I test drove the Honda Fit, I knew I was in Love and here's an account of why.

It's Stylish and Fun

One of the main reasons why anyone would consider the Honda Fit is its compact size that gives way to a stylish design. The car is sleek and smooth with touches of sportiness. The headlights attempt to give a mean look, but we all know the car is friendly and happy inside. The 5-speed automatic Fit is a fun drive regardless of the environment. The Honda Fit is designed with high quality materials and smooth control functions.

It's Comfortable and Versatile

Don't be fooled by the Fit's small size. The interior is roomy and multi-functional. When in use, the seats offer comfortable cushions and are supporting. Despite the compact nature of the car, there's plenty of leg room.

The seats recline for a more comfortable position, but they can also fold all the way down to make more room for new furniture, surfboards or art projects. The cushions of the back seats can also be lifted and tucked against the seat back so that you open up more space in the center as well. On top of it all, the passenger seat in the front folds back to add more cargo space.

It's a Great Drive

Regardless of where you drive the Fit, the 1.5 liter and 109 horsepower vehicle is responsive and doesn't need to carry around much weight. For the money you give for the Honda Fit, you get a car that is electronically steered and easy to shift with the 5-speed manual transmission. The suspension is sturdy for great handling and maneuverability. The electric power steering also helps save a lot of fuel.

It's Safe

Despite the weightless nature of the Honda Fit and the small size, this vehicle is at the top of the list of safe cars to drive. It can comfortably handle whiplash injuries and head-on collisions. The Honda Fit with navigation comes with Vehicle Stability Assist (VSA) as well as traction control. The car also offers six airbags along with light weight but strong materials.

It's Environmentally Friendly

Compact cars that have been recently coming out are great eco-friendly alternatives to other sedans, coupes and SUVs. They require fewer materials to produce and offer fuel-efficient engines. The Honda Fit offers 35 MPG and burns a lot less fuel than other cars.

It Has Unique Features

Honda managed to put 10 cup holders in the Fit. It is also equipped with iPod audio interface and Satellite-Linked Navigation.

The ultimate verdict is that the Honda Fit is definitely fit for any budget and is a friendly and fun car to drive around when running errands, going to work or school. The small size has not compromised good looks and Honda is a reliable and efficient make for any consumer.
